RIO JANEIRO, May 9 .- The strain on the relations between Brazil and Peru is re-by the troops of Peru of the Alto Purus and Alto Jura territories, saying that the Peru-

Statements Issued.

Statements have been issued by the Brazilian and Peruvian legations in this city regarding the dispute over territory lying in the Alto-Jurua and Alto-Purus valleys.

The Brazilian statement says:
"The assertion of right made by Brazil

Denied by Peru.

The Peruvian legation has made a count-erstatement to the following effect: "Peru

has never admitted in Brazil any right whatsoever to the territory actually in dispute. The treaty of 1851 contains no recognition of Brazil's rights as alleged by the Brazilian legation. The treaty is one of amity and commerce and does but incidentally touch upon the boundary question, ordering that a joint commission should determine a part of the boundary, namely, the bed of the Yavari river up to its origin.

That the joint commissioners, approximately fixed afterwards at latitude 7 degrees south.

The treaty made no reference as to the territory lying south of that point, which is precisely the one in dispute. When the surveying commission ended its explora-tion Brazil asserted that boundaries had been concluded between the two countries; but Peru held and notified that govern-ment, to the effect that its view was unac-ceptable, inasmuch as a great part of the frontier still remained undetermined."

Treaty of Petropolis.

"Brazil not only did never admit Peru's right to the territories, but, on the contrary, the recognition of right was formally made by Peru in behalf of Brazil. What Brazil, however, has done is to admit and reserve the claim of Peru, as seen by the treaty of Petropolis of the 17th of November, 1903, regulating the boundaries between Brazil and Bolivia. This is proof enough of the fairness of Brazil and of her dispositions of the property of the property of the second of The animals are not the only ones that are pleased with the coming of the summer months—far from it. As each year passes by the National Zoo is better and better patronized. New animals are received with frequency from Uncle Sam's representatives all over the world, and these specimens lend added interest to the already large collection on view. Not a few of the specimens were born in the park, and much care has to be exercised in caring for them when the time for the spring change comes. Animals from cold countries get along much better in summer than the animals from the tropical regions do in the winter season. As stated, the polar bears, of course, suffer during the time their visitors are clad in light gar-ments and straw hats, but their ice baths, in which they can cool themselves at will, take much from their discomfort.

The seals, which really prefer a bath that is crusted over with ice, manage to keep pretty lively during the warm season and do not show any bad effects from the change in temperature. As a matter of fact, all the specimens in the Zoo live in a sanitary and stationary condition—that is to say, provisions are made for their care and comfort as required by the seasons as they roll around.

During the week the feeding hour in the afternoon attracts a large number of visi-tors to the zoo and, by the way, it is not generally known that all the animals, reptiles and birds are fed according to a certain fixed schedule as to the rotation of various kinds of food. For instant meat is fed to the bears on Mondays and Thursdays, while on Tuesdays and Fridays they get fish. The birds are fed in accordance with their nativity, corn, wheat, sun flower seed, rape, wheat screenings or cracked corn. Sometimes these grains are mixed. Feeding time is probably the most interesting at the Zoo because at that hour all of the inhabitants are at their liveli-est. Most of the animals appear to know

Peru makes the rejoinder:
"The Pickney rule that supports the statement of the Brazilian legation does not apply in the present case, as the crowns of Spain and Portugal determined the boundary lines of their colonial dominions in 1777 by the treaty of St. Ildefonso, which for this section fixed the bed of the Madeira river as the parting line: all of the territory to the west of its banks going to Spain (today Peru) and that to the east to Portugal (today Brazil). The head waters of the rivers Jurua and Purus and the Acre river are precisely located in this zone—to river are precisely located in this zone—to the west of the Madeira. Her statement closes in the following words: "Peru maintains today, as she did when Bolivia was a party, and has always offered, and succeeded in establishing in some cases, that she is desirous of resorting to arbitration, without demanding previous conditions, unnecessary to governments really wishing to reach a prompt, just and pacific settlement of their differences."

Saturday morning, as reported on that day in The Star, services were held yesterday in the church. Addresses were made in regard to the progress of the work of this denomination and its future prospects.

For half a century there was no definite discussion of a return to the country of its original location. Messages commending the selection of this city have come from England, Scotland, Australia, Canada, British Columbia, Hawaii, Alaska and from every state and territory.
